

CONTENTS

11

Introduction

Colonial History and Decolonization 12 | What Was Already Known? 19 | The Research Project and this Book 23

29

1. The Stadtholders

The Stadtholders and the Republic 29 | The Stadtholders and Colonialism 32 | Maurits, Frederik Hendrik, and William 11 36 | William 111 44 | William 114 and v 48 | Conclusion 55

59

2. The Colonial Monarchy

Power and Involvement 59 | Knowledge 61 | William 1 67 | William 11 and William 111 71 | Emma and Wilhelmina 80 | Conclusion 88

93

3. The Postcolonial Monarchy

Knowledge 93 | Attitudes and Involvement 102 | From Self-evident Legitimacy to Apologies 114 | Conclusion 119

123

4. Profit

The Dutch Republic 124 | The Kingdom 130 | Conclusion 140

145

5. The Court

The Stadtholders' Collections 146 | The Royal Collections 156 | Patronage: the Arts, Exhibitions, Colonial Institutes 162 | Colonial Subjects at Court 167 | Conclusion 178

181

6. An Imagined Community

The Dutch Republic 183 | The Royal Myth about the Abolition of Caribbean Slavery 186 | The House of Orange in the Dutch East Indies and Indonesian Nationalism 190 | The Imperial Monarchy 197 | Pro-Orange-Nassau Sentiment in Suriname? 200 | Caribbean Ambivalence in Royalist Sentiment 209 | The House of Orange in the Postcolonial Netherlands 213 | Conclusion 218

221

Summing Up

The Conclusions 223 | Trans-Atlantic Slavery 226 | National Context 227 | International Context 230 | The Responsibility of the House of Orange-Nassau 232

235

Approach and Acknowledgements

239

Sources

247

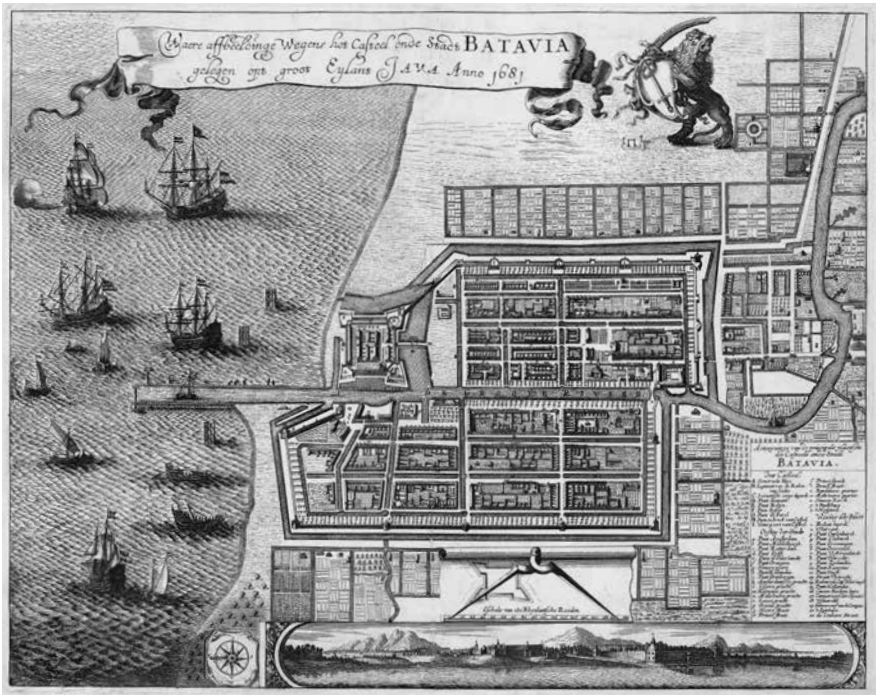

Bibliography

255

Illustration Credits

257

Index of Names

‘True image of the castle and city of Batavia, located on the great island of Java, in 1681,’ from Een toneel der [...] koopsteden en handelsplaatsen van den algeheelen wereld, J. Janssonius & Waerberge 1682. This map of Batavia shows the city walls with the bastions of Punt Oranien and Punt Nassauw, as well as the streets of Prince Straet and Prince Steech.

King Willem-Alexander at a sacrificial ritual on the Suriname River with representatives of Indigenous communities and the descendants of enslaved people. Paramaribo, 1 December 2025. Photograph by Remko de Waal, 2015.