

Table of Contents

List of Figures	9
Acknowledgements	11
Introduction. The Dutch Empire and Germanophone Europe	13
Transimperial Demands and German-speaking Europe	16
Globalising Colonial Medicine	22
Situating Colonial Physicians	26
Sources and Structure	29
Sources	29
Chapter Outline	29
Chapter 1. Germanophone Physicians in the Dutch East Indies:
Transimperial Markets for Medical Experts	33
Transimperial Markets for Science & Medicine	36
Medicine and the Military Monopoly on Knowledge	37
Germanophone Physicians, Medical Masculinity and the KNIL	44
Medical Mercenaries and the Military Labour Market	49
The KNIL and Transimperial Military Labour Markets	49
Recruitment of Physicians for the Dutch Colonial Army	52
From Military Medicine to Civil Health Care: Shifting Demands for
Medical Expertise	58
National Competition and the End of Military Recruitment	58
From Military to Civil Medicine	61
Interpersonal Networks and the German-speaking Diaspora	63
Conclusion	65
Chapter 2. Medical Mercenaries and Dutch Colonial Warfare:
Negotiating Race, Class, Gender, and Medicine in Aceh, c. 1880s–1890s	67
Medical Mercenaries and the Aceh War	70
The Daily Life of a Medical Mercenary	76
Medical Masculinities and Invisible Enemies	79
Medicalising Virtues and Vices in the Camps and Kampongs	82

“European” Doctors in the Tropics: Between Religion, Region, and Race	89
Racial Hierarchies in a “Creole Empire”	93
Gendered Knowledge and the Limits of European Medical Authority	97
Conclusion	105
Chapter 3. ‘Men on the Spot’ and Dutch Colonial Medicine:
Transimperial Tensions in Early Bacteriology (1880s–1900)	107
German-speaking Bacteriology in a Transimperial World	110
Competing Explanations and Epistemic Insecurity	117
The Colonial Contestation of the Bacteriological Paradigm	118
The Practitioner’s Privilege	123
Contingent Categories: Colonial Ideology and Bacteriological Knowledge	126
Between the Field and the Laboratory	129
Bacteriology, Colonial Ideology, and Race	132
Europe in the Tropics – the Tropics in Europe	136
Conclusion	142
Chapter 4. From “Koele Medicine” via Plantation Hygiene to International Public Health: German and Swiss Physicians on
Sumatra’s Plantation Belt	145
German-speaking Physicians on Sumatra’s Plantation Belt	150
The Coolie Ordinance: The Early Days of Plantation Health Care	154
German-speaking Physicians and the Scientification of “Coolie”
Healthcare	158
Race, Medicine, and the Commodification of “Coolie” Labour and Bodies	162
Model Villages and the Making of the ‘Modern’ Worker	168
Between Resistance and Collaboration	173
From Transimperial Medicine to International Public Health	178
Transimperial Careerism and the Colonial Antecedents of
International Public Health	183
Conclusion	186
Conclusion	189
Transimperial Medicine in an Age of Empire	190
Medical Masculinities and Transimperial Careerism	191
Colonial Co-constructions of Medical Theory and Practice	193
Limitations and Future Avenues	194

Bibliography	197
Primary Sources	197
Archival Sources	197
Published Reports	198
Newspapers and Periodicals	198
Published Sources	199
Private Collections	201
Secondary Sources	201
Books and Articles	201
Encyclopedia	225
Index	227